

Columns flow from one to the next when the text overflows the height of the column box, which this paragraph is long enough to do. It keeps going and going so that the second column fills, and then the third column starts to fill too, and after the third column it would continue on a new page.